WINTER CONDITIONS OF ELECTRIC SERVICE

The most trying conditions of service are now being met by the hydro-electric power companies. The snow is falling to the depth of many feet in the High Sierras where the power plants of this Company are located. Winter storms are centinually burdening the transmission lines with tens of ice and sleet.

To insure constant service to the public, employes are at all times patrolling these lines, regardless of weather conditions. Every energy and resource is being used and no expense spared, in order that the public may be uninterrupted in its use of electricity for these necessities which no other service can supply, or those luxuries which can be had only by electric service.

The Nevada-California Power Company
